

DAVID A HUGHES SHORT BIOGRAPHY

Following a successful career in several notable bands including OMD, David first moved into film composing in 1986, later teaming with John Murphy for the UK feature Leon the Pig Farmer. From that time Hughes & Murphy became the UK's most prolific film composers, completing over 20 feature films in six years, including Lock Stock & Two Smoking Barrels, which also spawned a platinum soundtrack album, and three major US studio features.

In 2001 David returned from the US to work solo and opened a fully digital recording facility in the centre of Liverpool. Recent projects have included the BBC's BAFTA nominated series Funland (receiving an RTS craft nomination), and the SKY/RHI production Terry Pratchett's Hogfather. David is also a director of well-established Merseyside multimedia company ESP Multimedia.

David was the Producer for 'Awaydays' and 'Powder', Red Union Films' successful debut features, as well as recent feature 'The Violators', for which he received a BIFA nomination for Producer of the Year.
